SHINE HAS SIGNED A DEAL WITH A BEAUTY GIANT IN A MOVE THAT WILL SET THEM APART FROM THEIR COMPETITORS, AS HAYLEY NISSEN DISCOVERS.

GIRLS, GET ready to shine.

Leading beauty service provider Shine has signed a new agreement with internationally acclaimed company Thalgo for their range of quality products. General manager Joel Turner, who is situated at the Shine head office in Bulcock Street, Caloundra, is excited about the deal, which was nine months in the making.

"It's a real feather in Shine's cap that they think we are worthy. It's a big product deal for the Shine brand."

Joel says the agreement will mean customers to the store, situated at Sunshine Plaza, will have access to higher quality services with a more extensive product range.

Owner of the Thalgo brand, Sol Caganoff, was so impressed by the Shine salons that he flew to the Coast especially to sign off on the deal. With plans for franchise expansion throughout Australia, Shine Beauty, the branch of Joel and his wife Tania, is beginning to reach its potential.

Tania and Joel opened their first Shine salon on the Gold Coast in 1999 and opened up on the Sunshine Coast a year later. While they previously had a product agreement with Thalgo, it was not to the same extent.

Thalgo representative Sandy Delitt says they were excited by the union and were looking forward to what lay ahead. "It is a match made in beauty heaven – an awesome trinity," Sandy says. "An advertising guru (Joel) with a proven track record in smart technology, and a passionate, experienced beauty industry professional (Tania) with an eye for detail and total dedication to customer care, aligning with an innovative world leader in skincare and result-driven treatments exclusively supplying to beauty salons and spas.

"They are a great couple going places and new franchisees will enjoy and reap the benefits of their experience and foresight."

The Thalgo brand is popular among many beauty-conscious women. The French-based company's superb products feature marine and plant-based ingredients, which is appealing to Coast residents given our beach lifestyle.
